

Joining the Air Cadets

with 1075 Camberley Squadron

Introduction

The Air Cadets is a national uniformed youth organisation sponsored by the Royal Air Force. As an Air Cadet you will get the chance of taking part in activities that others can only dream about. Learn to fly or glide, rock climbing or hill walking, experience trips overseas or simply make new friends and gain qualifications. The Air Cadets can literally put you on cloud nine.

This leaflet will explain to you the process of joining the Air Cadets with 1075 Camberley Squadron. For other Units see www.raf.mod.uk/aircadets

Eligibility

To join the Air Cadets you must have started Year 8 at school (or higher) and be under 17 years old. Other than that there are no restrictions. The organisation is open to boys and girls of any background, ability, religion or nationality. You don't have to join the armed forces, or even have a desire to become a pilot, just have a passion for fun and adventure.

How to Join 1075 Squadron

1075 Squadron operates a recruit intake system. This means that we only accept new members at set times. Our intakes start in early February and early September each year. The exact dates will be advertised on our Facebook page (see link below).

The intake system allows us to concentrate on providing you with quality basic training, to give you a good start to your cadet career. We have also found it is the best way for new cadets to bond and make friends with their fellow new cadets.

The exception is if you are 16. If you are 16 we will consider letting you join us outside of one of our usual recruit intakes. This is dependent on you taking responsibility for learning a lot of the material in your own time, to allow us to fast track you through your basic training. If you are 16 contact us straight away to arrange a meeting to discuss your options.

How the Intake works

Each intake starts with an induction evening where you and your parents will attend a presentation about the Air Cadets and how you can join us. You will be given all the paperwork required to join and get a chance to ask any questions you have before making the final decision to join us.

If you do decide to come back and join us the first three months will contain your basic training. This provides you with the key knowledge you will need for your cadet career. Learning how to march and wear your uniform. Learning about the Air Training Corps and the Royal Air Force, how an airfield operates and the history of flight. We will even teach you how to map read and survive outdoors in preparation for camping expeditions.

But it is not all learning, you will have fun too with trips away, together with sporting and social activities at the Squadron. At the end of the recruit training you will become a first class cadet and then the world is your oyster as this unlocks many of the amazing activities the air cadets has to offer. With the basic knowledge you have learnt you will be able to enjoy activities like flying and expeditions to a greater degree.
